OXFORDSHIRE, ENGLAND

Sunday June 28, 2009 – Friday July 10, 2009

WROXTON, UK

Wroxton College of Fairleigh Dickinson University is located in the Village of Wroxton, which lies on the northeast edge of an ironstone escarpment bordering the Cotwolds. These hills are in the southern Midlands, the rural heart of England. The Midlands region is rich in both urban and rural landscapes. Its influence in modern and historic Britain is hard to exaggerate. Birmingham is 40 miles to the north; it is Britain's second largest city. Oxford is 26 miles to the south, home of Britain's oldest university. Between these two cities are thousands of acres of the finest agricultural land, the ancestral homes of a score of great English families, and two important towns: Stratford-Upon-Avon and Banbury.

Wroxton village is two and one-half miles from Banbury. Although the village is small, it supports three churches (Church of England, Roman Catholic, and Methodist), a post office, a good hotel, and two public houses. "One of the most beautiful villages in the country," wrote E. R. Lester in his short story of Wroxton. Around the small pond in the center of the village stand fourteenth through twentieth century homes. They are built mainly of local honey-brown Horton Stone and roofed in decorative thatch.

The main College building is Wroxton Abbey, home to Wroxton College, a fully modernized Jacobean mansion on 56 acres of its own lawns, lakes, and woodlands.

The Wroxton College program is, above all, an academic program designed to be rigorous and stimulating, exacting and stretching, interesting and exciting. However, the academic content of the program is supplemented by the cultural and social experience of living in another country and by the travel opportunities. It is only through the systematic and first hand examination of the customs, traditions, and values of another country that one can develop a clearer understanding of not only a society and culture very different from our own, but also perhaps what is more important, of oneself.

INSURANCE VERIFICATION FOR STUDY ABROAD STUDENTS

All participants in Fairleigh Dickinson University's study abroad programs are required to carry insurance, which will cover them for illness, accident, and for major medical. It is preferred that this insurance also cover you for medical evacuation and repatriation (if you should become ill while abroad; evacuation can cost many thousands of dollars.) All participants must complete the form below and return it Brian Swanzey, Director of Wroxton and Study Abroad, with proof of coverage prior to departure. Proof of coverage consists of a copy of the insurance card and a copy of the section of the policy, which states that the participant will be covered while outside the United States. Many policies do not cover while traveling abroad. If the participant is covered under an employee benefit and a copy of the policy is not available, a letter from the employee's Human Resource Office may be submitted. For students that do not have insurance coverage, temporary coverage is available through the University. If such is the case, please advise Brian Swanzey, Director of Wroxton and Study Abroad, at 201-248-9625 or swanzey@fdu.edu.
